

Walk While Ye Have the Night for Morn

lyric · July 1, 2004

Walk While Ye Have the Night for Morn, Lightbreakfastbringer

I walk away walk away walk away from this
Through the doubt behind my eyes and the pulse of fear within My stride is straight my stride is true
It's taking me away from you

Deceived like an eclipse the sun has blinded all Scattered like shrapnel in chaos splintered in walls
Afraid that what we know is right and changing is the fuel
Dumped into the fire of fear—unknowing and disapproval

I walk away walk away walk away from this Broke through the cane and left a trail of feelings I discard
Crucified and drawn again gravel scorched and dusted
Left alone to ponder love and people that you've trusted

Innocent of all but knowing captured within the search was over
Held tight till your nails broke in the falling
The sky was aflame and your hope was razed to the ground
I held the match and I waited too long

I walk away walk away walk away from this
The blood that unites us red with impurity
Standing in silence I pray for deliverance
Resolve like an ocean washing away footprints

Interpretations—victim of yours
Regrets—I have none
Interpretation—victim of yours
Regrets—I have none
I walk away walk away walk away then I run
